AFRICAN ANCESTRY TRACING GOES MOBILE WITH AFRICANANCESTRY.COM'S FIRST-EVER MULTI-CITY
'WE ARE AFRICA' ROAD TOUR

Tour Designed to Demystify Myths and Celebrate Historical, Cultural and Genetic Connections to Africa

WASHINGTON, DC (July 2010) – If you think ‘Mobile Ancestry’ is another new app ... think again! In an old-school move, African Ancestry, the company that pioneered DNA-based ancestry tracing for people of African descent, is going “mobile” by loading up a van, a video camera and one of its co-founders and taking ancestry tracing on a 14-city trek to help African Americans more easily and accurately access their ancestral roots. The first-ever ‘We Are Africa’ Road Tour kicks off on August 1 in New Orleans and culminates on August 19 in New England, hitting 12 cities in between. People everywhere can follow daily video documentation of the tour on AfricanAncestry.com/RoadTour, Facebook at www.facebook.com/AfricanAncestry and YouTube at www.youtube.com/AfricanAncestry throughout August.

Recent studies by African Ancestry show that while many African Americans are aware of DNA-based ancestry tracing, a majority of people believe it’s out of their reach or for celebrities only. Additionally, with the excitement and enthusiasm for genealogy at an all-time high, barriers to the use of DNA still impede some populations from taking the transforming step to trace their African roots through science. African Ancestry’s ‘We Are Africa’ Road Tour debunks these myths through a series of free public events that include African Ancestry education forums, community conversations, ceremonial heritage “reveals” of local participants and family reunion-style fun activities with local artists and organizations. Replacing the Internet and other middle-man- mechanisms, the ‘We Are Africa’ Road Tour connects a network of co-hosts and home-city catalysts along the way in venues ranging from cultural centers and churches to theaters and bookstores.

“While enthusiasm in genealogy has risen to new heights, African Americans still hit a brick wall in their ancestral quest due to the break down in records during the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade,” said Gina Paige, co-founder of African Ancestry. “African Ancestry was created to bridge that gap through science and the We Are Africa road tour is an extension of our ongoing commitment to change the way people view themselves and Africa.”

African Ancestry Enthusiasts Help Shape ‘We Are Africa’ Road Tour

Earlier in the year, African Ancestry solicited the input from its online community of members and its local networks of partners and alliances to find out where the tour should go. Based on overwhelming feedback and excitement, it was clear where the ‘We Are Africa’ Road Tour would carve its path. Starting in New Orleans and other areas devastated by the largest oil spill in U.S. history, the ‘We Are Africa’ Road Tour will make its way to:
